Chip hits fan over Orenda sale

By JEFF NAGEL

Orenda's TIMBER licence should be taken away if the company doesn't keep its promise to the northwest, says Terrace mayor Jack Talstra.

He spoke out last week against a proposed buyout of Orenda Forest Products by a New York-based syndicate.

The plan is to divert Orenda's northwest timber to Gold River on Vancouver Island, where OFP Acquisition Corp. wants to reopen a closed newsprint mill.

The idea is getting a cool reception in the northwest, where Orenda has logged for nearly 10 years on the promise of establishing some kind of processing plant in the region.

Talstra was a strong supporter of Orenda's plans to build a $410 million high-tech pulp and paper mill south of Lakelse Lake.

Orenda has so far not come up with the financing needed for the mill. It has asked the province for a loan guarantee but has been told it should first demonstrate financial support.

"If Orenda cannot live up to its initial commitment, it seems to me they do not deserve a windfall out of this," Talstra said. "Either they live up to their anticipated commitments or they return the timber supply to the province and let somebody else do it."

More than half of Orenda's wood is vital to Skeena Cellulose's pulp mills at Port Edward, just outside of Prince Rupert, Talstra noted.

More on Orenda:

- Repap, Orenda tangle in war of words, Page A5
- Company execs poised to cash in, Page A5
- Orenda to test mobile chipper, Page A5

And any remaining wood in the licence not needed in Prince Rupert should be used to set up some kind of value-added plant in the region, he said.

"The wood should not go out of our region," Talstra added.

Talstra said Terrace councillors hope to meet with their counterparts in the region to prepare a regional consensus position on Orenda should a proposed licence transfer go to public hearings.

"To have any chance of being heard at all we have to be together and speak with one voice and speak as loud as we can," he said.

Also angry at the idea of Orenda's wood going south is Nisga'a Tribal Council president Joe Gosnell, who said he's astounded the idea hasn't drawn mass protests yet.

"If I was a worker in a mill in Port Edward, I would be up in arms," Gosnell said. "I would expect people to parade in the streets. Why not? Their jobs are threatened."

Orenda's forest licence in the Mezladin area falls mostly within the Nisga'a land claim and the Nisga'a have long protested the rate at which Orenda has been cutting timber there.

Gosnell also expressed doubts as to whether Orenda is adequately replanting trees there.

He said the rate of logging should be reduced and said the Nisga'a are "absolutely opposed" to the timber or fibre going elsewhere in the province.

"We think it should be retained in the region to protect the jobs of people here," Gosnell said.

Both Prince Rupert city council and Stewart mayor Andy Burton also oppose transfer of the wood outside the region.

Orenda had initially proposed a mill much closer to Stewart, but abandoned that plan and proposed the mill site near Onion Lake, between Terrace and Kitimat.

After that, Stewart mayor Andy Burton says he strongly doubted Orenda's commitment to any part of the northwest.

"They've been playing silly buggers with us and Terrace for the last six years," Burton said.

But he suggests Terrace was blinded by the possibility of getting a big-money mill. "I tried to tell them 'Don't be fooled — they did it to us'."

Burton also said any proposed change in Orenda's licence is an opportunity to ensure northwest mills have a secure wood supply.

It's very strange

THE BEST intentioned legislation can sometimes produce bizarre results.

Take the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act and the B.C. Winter Games.

Responding to the usual pre-event request from the Terrace Standard, the games office supplied the names of all Terrace athletes participating and their sports.

But a covering letter pointed out that under the Act, the sex and ages of the athletes could not be included.

That, explained games executive assistant Glenda Rae, is because those details are considered "personal information".

And under the act, personal information provided to a government institution for a certain purpose cannot be passed on to another institution — including newspapers — for their purposes.

Rae admitted the games events sometimes throw up a contradiction. Having complied with the Act by withholding specific identification of the athlete's gender, it then gives it away by noting the individual is competing in male or female hockey.

Asked why athletes cannot be asked to sign a waiver allowing the information to be released, Rae said that would be "an administrative nightmare."

The reason was most registration forms were completed by the team manager or zone representative for the particular sport.

"The athletes don't see the form," she said, adding it was therefore not possible to get a signature from each athlete.

Rae also pointed out there were potentially serious implications from the release of information that could identify someone.

She confirmed an athlete or their legal guardian could ask that even their name be withheld.

Rae recalled an occasion when this had happened, a single mother asking the name of her child not be published.

■ Heritage gown

IT'S HERITAGE Week next week and Miss Terrace candidate Kylie Oman sets the tone by wearing an antique 1939 ivory bridal gown. The gown was originally worn by Mary Brownlie, mother of Terrace resident Marilyn Davies. Kylie's veil is from Montreal, vintage 1897. The ensemble will be just one of several to be featured Feb. 26 at the Terrace Regional Museum Society's "100 Years of Fashion" revue. It opens at 2 p.m. in the arena banquet room.

City blasted for fee hike

By MALCOLM BAXTER

FIGURES USED by the city to justify a huge hike in Aquatic Centre user fees for youth groups make no sense, says a Blueback swim club official.

Club president Candice Kerman made the statement after a close examination of last year's city budget and projections for 1995.

The club is up in arms over city plans to increase the youth group pool rental fees by 38 per cent in July.

In a presentation to council, Kerman questioned the city's own figures.

She pointed out the 1995 budget — which includes the July hike — predicts total pool revenues will be $346,567.

Yet that figure is nearly $1,000 less than the pool actually took in last year.

"What is the rationale?" she asked council.

And noting pool revenues in 1994 were $31,000 higher than originally forecast, she asked if council would apply that surplus to this year's operations.

That, she pointed out, would reduce still further the amount to which the taxpayer subsidized the pool.

Kerman also wanted to know why other youth sports groups such as softball, baseball and soccer were exempt from paying maintenance for their fields.

"This appears to be a direct discrimination against those children who use structured indoor facilities," she suggested.

Charging the proposed rate increases had little or no relation to operating costs, she added. "They simply provide council with a means to gouge a few select taxpayers of this community."

The recreation user fees increases are also cause for concern for the Terrace Child and Youth Committee.

In a letter to council, committee heads Kerrie Reay and Graham Kay said the increases will make it more difficult for moderate and low income families to use those facilities.

While commending the city for giving price breaks to families on social assistance, they asked council consider the impact of the proposed increases "and the future implications for the well being of the community as a whole."

Both presentations were referred to this Friday's recreation committee meeting, to be held in council chambers at noon.

Meanwhile, Terrace Minor Hockey finds itself frustrated with the situation.

President Brian Downie explained the group finds itself caught in a vice: on one side the threat of sharply increased fees for use of the ice, on the other a continual whittling away at the number of ice hours they get.

It's gotten so bad, he added, there were suggestions the organization may have to reduce the number of players it will take next season in an effort to improve the quality of hockey for those who are allowed to register.

"It's depressing," Downie admitted.

"I don't think ice users are given credit for the contribution they make to the community," he continued.

Pointing out young people here need something to do over the winter, he said minor hockey did a good job of providing fun and teaching team work and skills. "Another source of discouragement for ice groups is council's hardline position on a second sheet of ice."

Noting his own team has played 35 of its 40 games this season on the road, Downie said that was both tiring and expensive.

Watershed restoration plans to accelerate

THINGS WILL be better in '95.

That's the prediction of Doug Johnston, Skeena's regional co-ordinator for the Watershed Restoration program.

Addressing a Sunday session of the Skeena Watershed Committee's weekend workshop held here, Johnston admitted the program had experienced "a lot of growing pains" in 1994, its inaugural year.

For the most part, he said, work under the program dealt with road deactivation — closing old logging roads — simply because the plans to do those projects had already been drawn up and approved.

However, some clearing of debris from gullies had taken place plus assessments of fish habitat as well as the work needed to stabilize banks and rehabilitate streams.

Although $2.2 million had been earmarked for work in the region, he said significantly less than that had been spent because of uncompleted projects owing to weather problems and costs of others coming in under budget projections.

One of the reasons Johnston anticipated improvement this year was a proposed organizational change. In 1994 assessment of projects was handled out of the regional office with the result that there were only four, and often just two staffers trying to cover the entire region.

That had proved "an impossible task," he added.

He anticipated the problem would be solved this year by having program co-ordinators in place on a district by district basis. Backed up by technical assistance from the regional office — biologists, hydrologists and engineers, for example — they will assess potential projects within their districts and forward their findings to the regional staff.

Region in turn will decide which projects to recommend

News In Brief

Budget on TV

TONIGHT BRITISH Columbians get a chance to air their views on the economy and suggest what kind of budget the province should bring down this year.

The hour-long "electronic town hall meeting" will air on BCTV beginning at 7 p.m.

The show will feature premier Mike Harcourt, finance minister Elizabeth Cull and University of B.C. professors Jon Kesselman and Angela Redish.

Viewers from around the province will be able to phone in and put questions to the panelists.

Seminars to outline WRP

THE WATERSHED Renewal Program (WRP), financed under the province's Forest Renewal BC, will be the subject of a series of seminars next month.

There will be three distinct seminars, one targeting forest workers, another the general public and the third for those interested in developing or being involved in monitoring WRP projects.

In Terrace, the general public gets its turn Wednesday, March 8, 7-9 p.m.

Project managers put in a full day — 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. — March 9 and that evening the series closes with a 7-9 p.m. session for forest workers.

Anyone interested in taking part should phone Carmen Wheatley at (604)847-8833 or fax (604) 847-3537.

Fire agreement gets first test

A LOADER FIRE on Braun's Island last week was the first test of the coordination of area firefighters under a new fire protection agreement.

Terrace fire chief Randy Smith said a man there was welding on a loader when sparks ignited some material beside it, which in turn ignited oil on the loader.

He said the man had enough fire extinguishers on hand to put out the fire.

Terrace and Thornhill fire fighters arrived minutes later to cool the smoking loader.

The fire protection agreement ensures Braun's Island and some rural areas north of Terrace are protected.

"It worked very well," Smith said. "Thornhill was right on the ball. They were right behind us. Had it been an actual fire, there would have been a good response."

Tires blown

AIR B.C. flights blew tires on the Terrace airport runway two nights in a row last week.

Both planes landed safely, but passengers were delayed.

Air B.C.'s evening flight 559 on Feb. 12 was the first to blow a tire when the Bae146 touched down at 6:55 p.m.

The same thing happened the next evening when another Bae146 blew a tire upon landing.

Air B.C. spokesman Hal Cameron said in each case the company chartered another plane and flew two mechanics and two replacement wheels up to Terrace.

Passengers continuing to Prince Rupert were sent by bus. Passengers flying out to Vancouver were shifted to Canadian Airlines.

The main landing gear consists of a pair of wheels under each wing, so loss of one tire isn't critical.

Rec cards get relook

THERE'S BEEN a huge response to the city's offer of free recreation passes for people on social assistance.

"The popularity of the recreation card pass has taken recreation staff by surprise," said councillor Ed Graydon.

The program was launched on the basis it wouldn't be an extra cost to the city.

"It now appears there will be a cost to the city and that's what we will be addressing," committee chairman Rich McDaniel said.

Gun regs no solution

THE FEDERAL government's proposed gun control legislation is more smoke than substance, charges Rod and Gun membership chairman Terry Morris.

Addressing a recent chamber of commerce luncheon, Morris emphasized some of the provisions the government was introducing as new were already in place.

For example, the legislation includes a mandatory five year jail term for using a weapon in commission of a crime to be served consecutively to any other sentence.

Morris pointed out existing legislation already provided for a one-to-five year term, also consecutive.

"Prosecutors never push it," he added, saying they frequently agreed to drop the weapons offense in exchange for a guilty plea to, for example, a robbery charge.

Rather than go to the time and expense of drawing up the new legislation, the government could simply have told the court system to implement the law that was already in place.

As for claims the legislation will keep guns out of the hands of criminals, Morris noted an Ontario Provincial Police survey conducted in 1993 found more than 80 per cent of the guns used in criminal activity had been smuggled into the country from the United States.

"He (federal minister Allan Rock) is blowing smoke at us, trying to fool us that he's doing something," he added.

"Taking all our guns away is not going to keep a single, solitary gun out of the hands of criminals," he added.

As for declaring certain weapons prohibited because of the way some people used them, Morris maintained, "What we do should determine what happens to us, not what we own."

As an example, he applied the same logic used in the gun legislation to the ownership of cars.

That would mean the government, having seen statistics that showed a certain make of car was involved in more accidents than any other, could declare that vehicle prohibited.

Therefore, you could find your car confiscated by the government even though you had done nothing wrong.

Morris also pointed out the registration of guns is not proposed to begin until two years after legislation is passed and even then be phased in over a five year period.

"If it's so important, why not do it right away?" he asked.

Morris suggested the answer was a licensing system similar to that used for drivers.

Like driving tests, there would be various levels, the lowest allowing ownership of a .22 calibre, the highest a permit to carry a gun for personal reasons.

As with driving, the individual would have to prove competence at each level to be licensed.

Dry kiln gets the go-ahead

COUNCIL HAS approved plans to construct a controversial dry kiln on Terrace Pre-Cut's Braun St. property.

However, the development permit to be issued will lay down a series of conditions which owner Mo Takhar has to abide by:

■ A two-metre solid fence must be erected on the south side of the property.

■ No processing of raw logs will be permitted on-site.

■ Exterior finish of the control room will match the finish of the kiln.

The Magnificent Eleven

Seniors head for a Texan roundup

THIS PROVINCE is too small for local Zone 10 Senior athletes. So they've decided to mosey on down to San Antonio, Texas this spring where they hope to rustle a few medals.

The northwestern riders for the Canadian posse will be competing in the pool, horseshoe pit, track and field events at the U.S. National Seniors Sports Classic V, taking place May 17-24.

Just to get the invitation, the magnificent eleven had to prove they are among B.C.'s best. Only winners of gold and silver medals at the B.C. Senior Games were eligible to be invited.

And Zone 10 athletes corralled their fair share of those at the Prince Rupert games last September.

Regardless of whether they can repeat that performance in San Antonio, Zone 10 Seniors member Alie Toop says the athletes will find the trip worthwhile.

"I think you learn a lot from something like this," she said, offering the chance to discuss different training methods as an example.

And there's the experience of competing against different athletes, top calibre ones at that.

Toop said a change of scene was the main reason Zone 10 jumped at the San Antonio games. "We wanted to go somewhere else to compete apart from the annual (B.C.) games."

Having heard about the Texan event, the Zone asked if it could take part "and they said sure," she added.

That was the easy part, however. Estimating the travel costs at $15,000, Toop said everyone in the Zone - not just those going to San Antonio - has been hard at work trying to raise the money.

And this has meant taking on

LOOKING FOR new challenges, eleven Zone 10 Seniors including Pat and Bud Kirkaldy (above) are planning to take on the stiff competition to be found at the US National Seniors Games in San Antonio, Texas. Bud is the co-ordinator for the B.C. contingent. Athletes from Ontario, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Alberta are also expected to attend the American games scheduled for May.

new projects.

Each year the Zone raises money through bake sales, raffles and running food concessions.

However, Toop explained, the Games regulations state money from activities normally run by the Zone can only be used for travel to the B.C. Games.

She said tickets are now being sold for an additional raffle in which all the prizes, including the first prize of a totem carved by Randy Tait, have been donated.

Seniors have also been running a coat check at Hanky Panky's, will be getting the proceeds of an upcoming K-Mart 'Jeans Day' and are soliciting donations from local businesses and individuals.

Any sponsor who donates $200 or more will have their name placed on the jackets the athletes will wear at the Games, she added.

Anyway wishing to contribute to Seniors for San Antonio can call Toop (635-2723) or Pat Kirkaldy (635-9505).

News In Brief

Unpaid traffic fines targeted

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT is hiring collection agencies to track down more than $129 million in unpaid traffic fines.

Judging by government statistics, those agencies will be busy because more than 500,000 people have so far evaded payment.

Collection agencies will be able to garnish wages and bank accounts and seize vehicles and property.

"These new measures will help ensure full recovery of outstanding traffic fines and make British Columbia roads safer by enforcing good driving habits," said highways minister Jackie Pement.

Up until now, the government's only power to collect unpaid fines is to refuse to renew driver's licences. But renewals are required only every five years.

Nearly three-quarters of those who have unpaid fines are under the age of 35 and the average amount is $260. Approximately $75 million in fines are paid each year.

The province is going to introduce legislation this spring allowing it to charge interest on unpaid fines.

Stewart to hold by-election

STEWART IS going to have a by-election, the second one in less than a year.

Councillor David Willan has resigned because he's taken an accounting job with the Gibraltar copper mine at McLeese Lake near Williams Lake. Elected in the 1993 general municipal election, Willan was an accountant at Westmin's Premier mine.

Nominations opened yesterday and close March 3 for the by-election which will be held April 8.

If past elections are an indication, between 70 and 80 per cent of eligible voters will turn out, says Stewart administrator Brian Woodward.

"We've traditionally had the best turnout for municipal elections in the province," he said.

A by-election was held last year to fill a seat vacated when councillor David Blais was killed in a plane crash.

Border post doubtful

STEWART MAYOR Andy Burton doubts if a plan by the United States to collect fees for foreigners entering that country will be put in place at the crossing between his community and Hyder, Alaska.

"I'd be amazed. I don't think the money collected would ever be enough to pay wages," said Burton. The plan by U.S. President Bill Clinton is to collect for each person and each vehicle entering the United States.

As the situation stands now, the majority of the cross border traffic between Hyder and Stewart is made up of Americans, said Burton.

Some of that traffic is generated during the summer months when the Alaska Marine Highway System runs a ferry connecting Hyder with other American communities on the Alaska Panhandle.

Hot times

IF YOU saw Skeena NDP MLA Helmut Giesbrecht bundled up last week it wasn't because of the north wind. Instead, Mr. Giesbrecht was wearing an asbestos suit and proving false that old saying, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

In this case the kitchen is Mr. Giesbrecht's Skeena riding and the heat is the volcanic explosion stemming from his government's cancellation of the Kemano Completion Project.

It's rare in B.C.'s extremely politicized atmosphere to have both business and labour ally themselves on any issue. But that's what's happened here as a result of the project cancellation. Business leaders responded by letters and union members by staging a protest in front of Mr. Giesbrecht's Terrace office.

Mr. Giesbrecht expected the business community reaction. The protest was another matter altogether because it came from a sector the NDP has traditionally regarded as a friend. In the world of politics, just as it is anywhere else, you simply don't embarrass your friends — at least in public.

Some of the reaction comes from Mr. Giesbrecht's muted defence of the Kemano decision. Consider his statement that it would have been foolish for the government to ignore the wishes of a majority of British Columbians who wanted the project killed. That's true politically but hard to explain up here at Kemano Ground Zero.

To Mr. Giesbrecht's credit he's hanging in there — asbestos suit and all. Last week he said he wouldn't be a "doormat" on which any group could collectively wipe its feet.

That's a good sign. Mr. Giesbrecht is by nature academic and introspective, two qualities not usually associated with the bombast of politics. A bit more fire and brimstone on his part just might be enough to counter the growing perception that he's in political trouble.

Wait a minute

SECOND EDITORIAL

WAIT. WAIT. WAIT. Before considering any further the matter of transferring the forest licence of Orenda Forest Products, there's one important issue hanging.

And that's exactly how much wood is up there in the North Kalum Timber Supply Area. Study upon study suggests the amount being cut there now can't continue.

The province's chief forester is to make a decision on new annual allowable logging limits based on those studies. That decision was to have been made last year but there's now no indication of when it will be made.

It simply doesn't make sense for forests minister Andrew Petter to ponder the Orenda licence transfer request without first knowing what the North Kalum cut is going to be.

If, for instance, the cut is reduced, permitting Orenda's new owners to move wood out of the northwest will simply add to an already shaky fibre supply situation.

Practice what you preach

VICTORIA — I start my news fix by reading the Victoria daily over coffee. On my way to the press gallery, I listen to the 8 a.m. news on the CBC. Once at work, I skim through the two Vancouver papers and the Globe and Mail, if it's available.

The morning of Feb. 15, for the first time in days, there was no mention on the front page of the federal budget. Unfortunately, the respite didn't last very long. The CBC news devoted what seemed like the first 10 minutes to the budget that was still two weeks away.

I have become accustomed to the pre-budget news routine. Without fail, it goes something like this: "Finance Minister Paul Martin does not rule out tax increases." The deficit, he says, must be brought under control.

Enter the anti-tax brigade, which appears to have organized meetings in just about every town across Canada during the past weeks. "Finance minister warned not to increase taxes."

Next come the special interest groups. The arts community says the finance minister would be making a big mistake to reduce federal support for the arts. Aids support groups warn Ottawa that the whole country will get infected with HIV if Martin doesn't come through with the usual grants.

FROM THE CAPITAL

Provincial governments, too, get in the act. They don't want Ottawa to cut back on transfer payments to the provinces. And on it goes. With tiresome predictability, every special interest group imaginable doesn't want to take a cutback in funding. Meanwhile, Canadians to the last man, woman and child are screaming for deficit reduction.

What seems to escape most people is that in order to get the country's financial mess under control, some sacrifices will have to be made. The demand for federal deficit reduction is meaningless without everyone's willingness to pitch in. But nobody seems to be in the mood to do that.

Did I say, nobody? Not so. On the op-ed page of my daily, in the same Feb. 15 edition that didn't have a front-page story in the federal budget for a change, there was a contribution from Trudy Newbury, featuring a sure-fire way to get the country's fiscal woes under control.

Newbury is no economist, which should make her scheme actually more credible. She is a student at the University of Victoria, studying toward entrance into a Masters in Counselling and Psychology program. She's also the single parent of a 14-year-old boy.

She would like every Canadian to contribute $10 a month to the government to pay down the debt. In no time flat, she says, the debts will be wiped out. And she practices what she preaches.

"My son and I have made a commitment to the country that has blessed us so generously over the years. Together we will be giving Canada $240 a year (12 post-dated cheques) towards paying the deficit."

That's just two people, an only parent and a 14-year-old boy. I invite you, our neighbours and friends, to show the world what one country can do when it starts pulling together and working for good."

I realize, of course, that there is an army of economists out there, ready and willing to pounce on such a simple scheme. Mind you, these are the same economists who are all in favour of debt-reduction and elimination, but on someone else's back.

I have no idea if it could work or not, but what impresses me is Newbury's willingness to do something about the deficit problem, and that she's willing to make a personal sacrifice to achieve the goal of making Canada debt-free.

Nor does she seem to be concerned that she might be the only one donating $20 a month to Canada on behalf of her son and herself. When she sees the deficit figures, she says, she can tell herself, "Hey, that would be $10 more if it weren't for me."

As far as I am concerned Newbury's proposal weighs in more honest and more convincing than any of the dozens of tax protest meetings that have been held these past few weeks.

Mair ban plan not needed

WHO NEEDS a plastic surgeon to lift drooping eyelids when every newscast imparts startling revelations. Last week delivered some boggles.

First, word came the provincial government is building a $250,000 roadside biffy in southern B.C. Made of concrete blocks and heated around the clock, the rest stop will have running hot and cold water, and fans.

"For highway safety, motorists need a comfortable rest station", a spokesperson said. Sure. And once word gets around, it will become an overnight pad for deadbeats who'll roll out their sleeping bags and camp free overnight. There'll be drinking, vandalism...

Next, we learned that federal fisheries minister Brian Tobin, the Newfoundlander who presided over the cod moratorium that made welfare recipients out of hardworking fishermen, had spiffed up his office to the tune of thousands of dollars. His centerpiece is a $6,000 conference table.

THROUGH BIFOCALS

Then, Vancouver police charged a man after they raided his house and found a $2 million cache of stolen goodies. Along with 147 guns, many of them Uzis and Ak-47s, 53,000 round of ammunition, VCRs and other hi tech equipment, he had three stolen sports cars. So awed was the court, he was released on his own recognizance without a dime of bail.

A lower mainland library board cancelled library shelf space for all free publications. The board took this slippery step to block display of one gay publication the board deemed offensive.

But it took Terrace council to braid my eyelashes into my eyebrows with their motion making Terrace a "Rafe Mair Free Zone." Do you have any idea how hard it is to braid short hairs while bent double laughing?

Rattled by Harcourt's decision to kill Alcan's Kemano project — a move Rafe Mair advocated — council banished Mair from their sandbox. However, mindful of the many chamber of commerce members who profit from tourism, council graciously permitted Mair to walk Terrace streets and hunt and fish here several years ago.

Council also doesn't want Mair hollering down their rain barrel. They "encouraged" CFW to cancel Mair's talk shows.

Besides brain scan, council may need chiropractic treatment. They could dislocate their shoulders yanking the welcome mat from under Mair with one hand while grasping for his wallet with the other.

It's doubtful northwest residents appreciate council's censorship on their behalf. Nor should residents be deprived of programming because council doesn't happen to see eye to eye with a radio host's utterances.

One thing is sure. Having interviewed countless experts and partisans on both sides of the Kemano question, Rafe Mair should have a more balanced perspective of the Kemano project than a council intolerant of opposing views.

PAWS

ORENDA

Trading shots

THE FIRST shots were fired last week in what could be a war over the planned sale of Orenda Forest Products and its forest licence.

A New York-based investment syndicate wants Orenda's wood to help re-open a closed newsprint mill at Gold River on Vancouver Island.

But Skeena Cellulose, which buys pulp fibre from Orenda, says it also needs the wood to keep its two pulp mills at Prince Rupert operating.

It said losing the Orenda wood would lead to the closure of its Prince Rupert B mill and the loss of up to 250 jobs.

Orenda vice president Frank Foster questioned Skeena Cellulose's statements, saying the company purchased nowhere near the amount of fibre it said it did.

Reports last week indicated Skeena Cellulose purchased 100,000 cubic metres a year and has an option to purchase up to another 100,000 cubic metres.

That amounts to about 9 per cent of the requirements of Skeena Cellulose's two Prince Rupert pulp mills.

Foster said Orenda's figures show Skeena Cellulose bought 79,000 cubic metres from last spring up until the end of January and 37,000 cubic metres in the period before that.

"We have tried to refrain from discussing customer relationships and so on but we feel Repap (Skeena Cellulose's parent company) is fear mongering with respect to fibre," said Foster.

Frank Foster

He was particularly curious about Skeena Cellulose statements that Orenda wood makes up 30 per cent of the supply for the former's Prince Rupert B mill.

"We know that the mill has a capacity of one million cubic metres annually. Our sales to them come nowhere close to that," said Foster.

And if Skeena Cellulose needs fibre, said Foster, it has additional supplies through a minority ownership position in Buffalo Head Forest Products.

That company logs in the Stewart area, just as does Orenda. Skeena Cellulose has a 49.5 per cent stake in Buffalo Head.

Pat Ogawa

"We understand that Buffalo Head last year sold 80,000 cubic metres of pulpwood fibre to third party interests. If that's the case, how can Repap say they have a shortage," Foster said.

Skeena Cellulose Prince Rupert pulp mill manager Tom Boughner said the company singled out B mill in its worries over losing Orenda wood because it is the more vulnerable of the two mills it operates.

Arriving fibre first goes to the A mill and then to B mill, he said.

"If we are to run a shortage, it's felt on the B side. If we can't get the fibre we need that's where the impact is. It's just not viable to run it at 60 per cent capacity," said Boughner.

Another Skeena Cellulose official, Terrace-based Pat Ogawa, said Orenda is concentrating on the past when there was a low demand for pulp and paper products and not the present.

He acknowledged that Skeena Cellulose didn't purchase Orenda fibre up to the level indicated in its sales contract.

"In past years we may not have bought as much from Orenda. That's changed. You know there was a surplus of fibre accrued in the past," said Ogawa.

"Last year we closed B mill down for the first quarter. Now we need every chip we can get," he said.

As evidence of Skeena Cellulose's fibre shortage, it just last week told Orenda it wants to buy all of the 100,000 cubic metres as called for in its contract for the coming year.

And it wants to exercise the option to take another 100,000 cubic metres.

The contract between Skeena Cellulose and Orenda has two years left to run.

As for Buffalo Head Forest Products, Ogawa said it takes delivery on as much of that company's pulp it can under its minority ownership.

The majority owners of Buffalo Head are then free to sell remaining supplies elsewhere.

Orenda targets recovery

ORENDA FOREST PRODUCTS is going to test a mobile chipper next month in the Meziadin area where it logs.

The intent, says company vice president Frank Foster, is to increase the recovery rate of its logging operations.

It's also a sign the company wants to demonstrate that it's working toward fulfilling a requirement in its forest licence.

That requirement states the company must have some kind of wood processing facility in place by November 1996.

And this could be a factor to balance growing opposition to a planned amalgamation of Orenda and its forest licence with a New York-based investment syndicate.

That syndicate wants to use Orenda wood to re-open a closed newsprint mill at Gold River on Vancouver Island.

Northwest politicians and some companies, citing a pulp fibre shortage here, say they don't want Orenda wood to leave the northwest.

"We've been compiling fairly extensive and expensive information," said Foster of its chipping test project. "We're going to test to see if it's economically viable to bring out material we can't presently use."

Foster noted that increasing prices for fibre and a fibre shortage makes it worthwhile to try to use wood which would have been left behind several years ago.

A chipper is also one way of adding value to Orenda's fibre.

One big unknown factor in Orenda's chipping plans is what its proposed new owners will do.

OFF Acquisition Corp., the company formed by the New York-syndicate, has so far refused to outline its plans for Orenda or for its forest licence.

But Foster did say OFF has told Orenda there is a likelihood of new jobs as a result of the proposed amalgamation.

He said the proposed new owners will also have the option of further considering a long-standing Orenda plan to build a pulp and paper mill between Terrace and Kitimat.

Foster did note that Orenda is the only one of three companies to receive forest licences in 1985 in the Stewart-Meziadin area still trying to set up a processing facility.

Establishing a processing facility was one of the requirements contained in the licences when they were granted.

One of the companies, Tay-M, has since been sold to West Fraser. The other, Buffalo Head Forest Products, is now owned 49.5 per cent by Skeena Cellulose.

vate Placements Ltd.

Company vice president Frank Foster owns 153,000 shares carrying a resale value of $841,500.

Company executives also stand to profit by exercising share options. These are agreements whereby a company agrees to sell employees stock within specific time periods.

Cooper, Foster and a third company official, solicitor John Sparks, all have such option arrangements.

Cooper last December had an option to buy 200,000 shares. That was supplemented Dec. 13, 1994 by an option to buy another 100,000 shares at $2.72 a piece.

Foster was granted an option, also on Dec. 13, to buy 50,000 shares at $2.72 a piece. That's on top of an existing option to buy 100,000 shares.

Sparks also received an option to buy 50,000 shares at $2.72 a piece. As is the case with Foster, he already had an option to buy 100,000 shares.

Speaking last week, company vice president Frank Foster said it is not unusual at all for companies to establish stock option agreements with employees.

"There isn't a company in this province that doesn't do this," he said.

Orenda wants to have the amalgamation approved at a shareholders' meeting in mid-April.

A majority of shareholders must give their assent.

Orenda already had the approval of 52 per cent of its shareholders when it and OFF Acquisition structured the deal.

The amalgamation must also have court approval under a provision of the B.C. Company Act.

OFF Acquisition must also raise the money for the share redemption plan in time for the Orenda shareholders' meeting.

Remember other victims, too

Dear Sir:

The kidnapping, sexual assault and murder of Melanie Carpenter has left many people across the country shaken and outraged. The result of violence has a face. The creator of tragedy has a face.

But whose face is it?

The Terrace Women's Resource Centre staff has had many phone calls about the incident at the centre and at home. We have had two separate petitions delivered to our door. People are upset, angry, and determined to get involved.

The petitions, one from the Melanie Campaign Society, see violence against women and children as a problem of the justice system. Both petitions demand stiffer penalties, more incarceration, longer jail sentences, more legal and law enforcement action. There are areas we can agree with these petitions. But more is needed. Personal involvement is needed.

All the victims of violence have faces. Every one of the more than 100 women each year that die as a result of violence. Every one of the more than one million women assaulted each year in Canada.

Why are we shocked at the death of Melanie Carpenter and not at the number of battered women who run to transition houses every day of the year? We must join together and demand within our own community.

It was not only justice system that failed Melanie Carpenter. It was also every one of us who live in this culture who are too afraid, or busy or unseeing. Those are the faces who perpetuate the violence.

And those are the faces that can stop the violence. We must go farther than reforming the justice system. There are no easy answers or quick fixes. We have to work today, and every day in every part of our lives. Only then will the violence end.

Rafe, Rafe and more Rafe

An open letter to Terrace City Council:

Dear Council Members:

Declaring the City of Terrace a Rafe Mair Free Zone shows years of environmental inquiries into the KCP project are discarded with a stroke of a pen. Now silent perversion takes over to punish the listening public of CFWJFM.

To interfere with a private broadcasting station's choice to air Rafe Mair shows some council members are in a conflict of interest. Council was voted in by Terrace residents to administer the city, to interfere in a private business is wrong.

Although I don't agree with the killing of the KCP project, I didn't attend the public environmental inquiries, either.

Terrace city council should have aired their views actively at those meetings. Maybe then a compromise could have been reached to complete the project to everyone's satisfaction.

Do you plan to ban the content of a newspaper next?

Manfred Bader,
Terrace, B.C.

Dear Sir:

I had to chuckle to myself after reading your article "City Slams Rafe Mair". It should have read "City Council Decides to Censor What Public Listens To."

How could anyone be so childish as to feel it necessary to ban a radio show simply because the host had (has) a difference of opinion. Whether I agree with Mr. Mair or not, he has the right to speak his mind and Terrace has the right to listen to him.

For those who disagree with Mr. Mair, it's easy enough to walk up to your radio and hit the switch. I believe it's called the right to free speech and if city council cannot handle hearing an opinion other than their own, then perhaps they're in the wrong line of work.

Rafe Mair discusses some very interesting topics on his program and aside from being against our rights to listen to what we choose, I feel Terrace would be missing out if council gets their way and the show is banned. We are secluded enough from the rest of B.C. Let's not let ourselves be alienated over such a trivial matter. Mr. Mair may have influenced a large number of people over KCP; however, he did not make the final decision. If you are not happy with it then don't vote NDP next time.

C. Stenmark,
Terrace, B.C.

Dear Sir:

My motion about taking Rafe Mair off the air was never meant to be taken seriously. It was meant to get attention and it did.

Terrace city council wants to send a message to the lower mainland to say that we are hurting up here in the north. We feel threatened; our economic well being is continually being sacrificed on the altar of political expediency.

There is an uproar over the issue of freedom of speech. What about our freedom of speech? Rafe Mair's talk show is so plugged up with lower mainland calls it is impossible for northerners to get through. One individual from Terrace I spoke to mentioned that he has been trying for over two years to get on the show!

I challenge Mr. Mair to come up to the north and broadcast live. Perhaps then we can get our concerns on the table and Mr. Mair can talk face-to-face with the men and women whose livelihoods are on the cutting block.

We live in the north. We have to band together and speak out to protect our way of life.

I regret that my motion was upsetting to some people. The last thing I wanted to do was to offend anyone.

But, if nothing else, people throughout the province are talking about Terrace and about the latest blow to our economy and so maybe, in this case, the ends have justified the means.

Ed Graydon,
Terrace, B.C.

Fires at Safeway

SOMEBODY LIT two fires last week at Safeway. They were small fires. And they were put out fast. There was not a lot of damage. There were no injuries. The store was closed for a couple of hours.

Police are still looking for a suspect. He is a teenager. He has blonde hair and wears glasses that have a gold frame. On the day of the fire, the teenager was wore jeans, runners and a light jacket.

They think the teenager got into a pick up. They think it is a gray Nissan pick up. And they think the pick up was dirty. There were three other people in the pick up.

If you can help the police, give them a call. The phone number is 638-0333.

Hugh Cooper

SENIOR EXECUTIVES of Orenda Forest Products will profit handsomely from the sale of their company to a New York-based syndicate.

The deal calls for Orenda to amalgamate with OFF Acquisition Corp. and form a new company, Orenda Newsprint Ltd.

Orenda Forest Products shareholders will receive preferred shares in the amalgamated company which will be immediately redeemed for $5.50 each.

That price is in excess of the current trading price and is higher than the historical price for Orenda stock.

Topping the list is Orenda founder and president Hugh Cooper who owns outright 900,821 shares.

At $5.50 each, that amounts to just over $4.95 million. Cooper also owns another 38,500 shares through a company through a company called International Pri-

Sale worth millions to execs

SAFeway ASSISTANT manager Gord Gillis takes vacuum cleaner to a store shelf after fire extinguishers were used to put out two deliberately set fires there Feb. 12. There was minimal damage but the store was closed for several hours.

Police seek fire setter

POLICE ARE still looking for the people who set two fires in the Safeway store here Feb. 14.

The fires were quickly extinguished and the store was closed for two and a half hours to clean up.

The fires were set using matches and aerosol cans taken from the store shelves.

Damage to store fixtures and products was minimal, said Safeway store manager Andy Millar.

Police want to talk to a white male, approximately 17 years of age, seen leaving the area shortly before the fires were discovered.

The teenager has blonde hair, wears gold-framed glasses and was wearing a light-coloured spring jacket and blue jeans.

He was seen leaving the Safeway parking lot in an older model grey Nissan pickup truck, possibly a supercab, with three other persons.

There was dirt in the back of the truck and the truck itself was dirty.

"If this was a kind of prank, it was awfully stupid. It could have hurt people," said Smith.

RCMP Staff Sergeant John Veldman said officers have recovered evidence they hope can lead them to the persons involved.

The fires just might be the first crimes to feature in the community's newest effort to combat crime, added Veldman.

Crimestoppers, whereby rewards are offered for information leading to the conviction of people responsible for criminal acts, is set for a March introduction here.

"If we don't make any progress in the next couple of weeks, it just might be ideal," said Veldman of the fire investigation.

The RCMP can be contacted at 638-0333.

Teens face charges

Guns stolen from home

THREE 17-year-old Terrace youths were arrested in Prince George last week with four handguns stolen from a Terrace home.

Theft and weapons charges are pending, Terrace RCMP Staff Sgt. John Veldman said.

Police were alerted that the youths were leaving town, he said, and RCMP in Prince George apprehended them there.

He said they hitch-hiked to Prince George.

Veldman described the handguns as being of various calibres and sizes, adding many of them were older firearms.

The owner had secured the guns under lock and key, but the lock and been forced. There were no trigger locks, Veldman added.

"It's kind of scary to have those things on the street," Veldman said. "Nobody got hurt and that's the important thing."

The owner wasn't aware the guns were missing until one turned up in Terrace.

Police traced it to the owner via the registration number.

The three suspects have since been released on bail.

Veldman said police suspect the three may be linked to other incidents in Terrace, adding more charges may be laid.

Two local teenagers face mischief charges in connection with a Valentine's Day incident at the Woodland Apartments.

RCMP Staff Sgt. John Veldman said one male and one female young offender were apprehended there breaking a window and lighting a fire.

The two are to appear in court later this month.

BUSINESS REVIEW

■ What a charge

GLENN GOUDREAU of West Fraser Electro/Mechanical Ltd. peers through an electric motor he's rewinding. The company has just won a B.C. Hydro PowerSmart award for sales, service and promotion of energy efficient electrical motors. The company has outlets here and in Williams Lake and headquarters in Prince George.

B.C. mine guys look elsewhere

THE REAL ACTION for B.C. mining companies is happening in places like South America — not in B.C.

Terrace city councillor Val George said that was crystal clear at the annual Cordilleran Roundup mining conference two weeks ago.

He said about half the B.C. mining executives there had flown in from places like Chile, Brazil and Indonesia.

"All our mining companies are off in these foreign countries doing business and not doing it here in British Columbia," he said.

George said the mining community considers the northwest one of the few bright spots in an otherwise dismal picture of mining in B.C.

"There's a little bit of hope up here, but not anywhere else," he said.

The Eskay Creek gold mine opened just last month and although Barrick Gold has still to make up its mind about its Red Mountain property near Stewart, it's still considered a viable ore body.

City economic development officer Ken Veldman was also there.

"Spanish was probably spoken more than English," he said.

There continues to be interest in northwestern B.C., he said, noting half of the exploration dollars spent in B.C. last year went into that area.

But the amount of rules and taxes in B.C. are a common complaint with mining companies, Veldman added.

Stewart ore work planned

A FORMER provincial cabinet minister wants to spend $1.8 million this year on two gold properties near Stewart.

Tom Waterland, now of Aquaterra Mineral Development Ltd., says the Ashwood property, approximately 14 miles southwest of the Red Mountain property, and the Georgia River property have encouraging gold prospects.

Ashwood and Georgia Creek were two of three areas targeted by Aquaterra for advanced exploration using helicopters and state-of-the-art techniques.

Georgia Creek work is estimated at $1.3 million while development at the Ashwood property should cost $500,000.

A geologist hired by Aquaterra says the two properties have the same kind of volcanic and sedimentary rock formations as the new Eskay Creek gold mine and the Red Mountain property.

"The areas the company is focusing on are generally located in steep, mountainous coastal areas where it is necessary to make extensive use of helicopters," said Waterland.

The properties are located close to tidewater, a factor Waterland said will reduce costs should they proceed to the production stage.

Out & About

Forest plan taking shape

THE PROVINCIAL government's new crown corporation responsible for silviculture and reforestation is looking for a northwest regional manager.

Forest Renewal B.C. is going to spend $400 million a year in the woods.

The regional manager will earn up to $77,442 a year and be responsible for the corporation's activities within the Prince Rupert forest region.

There's no word yet on the location of Forest Renewal B.C.'s northwest office.

Disease and the workplace

LOCAL HEALTH officials are holding a one-day session Feb. 25 on communicable diseases and the workplace.

Called "Catching it at Work," the session will examine diseases and precautionary measures.

Scheduled to speak are local doctors and health care officials. Tuberculosis, HIV/AIDS, Hepatitis B and sexually transmitted diseases are among those on the agenda.

The session is being hosted by the Skeena Health Unit and Northwest Community College.

To register, and for more information, contact Fred Adair at Northwest Community College. The phone number is 635-6511, Local 5297.

Credit reports extended

BUSINESSES WILL soon have the same rights as individual consumers when it comes to checking to see if credit information is correct.

"Information given out by credit reporting agencies has a direct impact on the livelihood of small businesses. Businesses and consumers should be able to review their credit files and correct mistakes where necessary," said provincial small business minister Bill Barlee.

The amendments allowing businesses to check their credit information go into effect March 1.

ROSSWOOD HOME owner Tina Dircks scrambles out of the way as a blaze consumed the log home of herself and her husband, Len, Feb. 12. Friends, relatives and neighbours have rallied around to provide help. The couple has every intention of rebuilding and a trust fund in the couple's name has been started at the Toronto Dominion Bank in Terrace. STEPHANIE ROLFE PHOTO

Retirement home burns at Rosswood

FRIENDS AND neighbours of Len and Tina Dircks who lost their Rosswood home to fire Feb. 12 have started a trust fund to help them rebuild.

Remains of the log home on Brousseau Road have already been cleared by a neighbour and building supply stores have been contacted, says neighbour Sylvia Johnson.

"They need all the help they can get. I can put myself in their position very easily," said Johnson.

Another neighbour has already volunteered to mill wood for a new structure.

The Len and Tina Dircks Trust Fund has been set up at the Toronto-Dominion Bank in Terrace.

The Dircks, both of whom are in their 70s, retired to Rosswood in 1986 from Prince Rupert.

The frame of the log structure was built by Don Brousseau in the early 1980s and finished when the Dircks moved to Rosswood. It was not insured.

A tanker truck belonging to the Rosswood Volunteer Fire Department had no water in it because there are no facilities to prevent freeze up during the winter.

Daughter Beatrix Dircks said the loss affected the family greatly because Don Brousseau was a close family friend and because family members spent a lot of time working on the home.

The fire began inside the roof of the home on the morning of Feb. 12.

An exact cause hasn't been established but it's believed to have been set off by a spark from a chimney.

Although the chimney wasn't in use at the time of the fire, a spark could have very well been blown down earlier by severe down drafts in the area and become lodged inside the roof.

Neighbours and relatives responded quickly and fought the blaze for an hour and a half, said Beatrix Dircks.

"At one point they did have it under control. But it was so deep inside, they couldn't get at it," she said.

And when the group fighting the fire realized they could do no more, attention turned to removing items from the house.

A fridge, stove and chim cabinet were among the items saved before the fire spread.

Discover the ART OF SEWING

Learn the Art of Cutwork Embroidery

Cutwork was originally a hand sewing technique done by nuns in convents. The nuns carefully guarded the secrets of their beautifully hand-whipped stitches until the 15th century. Today cutwork is easily sewn by machine with the same perfect results.

Join us on April 22 for this half day hands-on session. You will discover which fabrics, notions and stitching techniques to use to obtain truly professional results. The finished project is a cutwork collar which you can make for yourself or for someone you love.

Council pay hike put off

CITY COUNCILLORS won't give themselves a pay raise this year.

Council voted unanimously to defer any change in their pay for one year.

The move came after council rejected an initial motion by councillor David Hull to defer the decision to later this year.

That's what council has consistently done with the issue in recent years.

But councillor Val George called on council to be up front and forgo a raise for one year immediately.

"Given the kinds of things council has been doing, I think it would be an appropriate gesture to make," George said.

The mayor receives $20,256.30 per year. Each councillor receives $8,830.12. A third of those amounts is an expense allowance.

Council last month voted to stop supplying sandwiches at each committee meeting.

They also approved a plan presented by city staff to switch to an employee-pay coffee fund, saving the city nearly $7,000 a year in coffee expenses.

Spouses still ride the skies

CITY COUNCIL seems less eager to rush to limit travel by councillors and their spouses.

Councillor Ruth Hallock proposed the city pay for just two people — one councillor and one staff member — to travel to the annual Union of B.C. Municipalities convention this fall.

No spouses would attend, and the city would not budget for any travel to the North Coast Municipal Association convention in Williams Lake.

But Hallock's motion didn't get a seconder and died without a vote.

The city has budgeted $13,000 for the trip to the UBCM conference in Vancouver Oct. 2-6.

Five city councillors and their spouses, city administrator Bob Hallor and his wife, and economic development officer Ken Veldman are all scheduled to attend.

Although the convention is planned for the Vancouver Trade and Convention Centre, they won't be staying at the $170-a-night Pan Pacific Hotel.

Hallor says they've booked rooms at O'Douls Hotel, five blocks away.

"It's in the cheaper rent district," he said. "Our palace goes for $100 a night."

The budget for the conference also covers air fare, registration and banquet fees, and a $50 per day expense allowance for each councillor.

Hallock noted the estimated cost is $1,400 per person.

Trash fee worries

Residents of Twin River Estates are probably going to be the only seniors in town who will be charged full rate for garbage collection.

Residents there have received no-cost garbage collection from the city up to now.

But the city is going to be out of commercial garbage collection by April and that means Twin River will likely have to hire a private contractor and pay the going rate.

Skeena Senior Citizens Housing Society secretary Wilma Costain demanded to know whether the city would pick up the cost.

"Do you, Mr. Mayor and members of council, expect our seniors to switch to a private garbage collection at whatever price the collection firm charges when other seniors in Terrace have no-charge garbage collection?" Costain wrote.

The issue will be discussed at today's public works committee meeting.

Talk show host wanted up here

THE COUNCILLOR who wanted talk show host Rafe Mair taken off the air is now demanding he come up here and listen to northwesterners.

Ed Graydon said he's received at least 30 phone calls since city council passed his motion to declare Terrace a "Rafe Mair Free Zone."

Mair raised the ire of some northwesterners by campaigning for numerous months against Alcan's Kemano Completion Project.

Many callers were critical of councillors for trying to block freedom of speech.

"What about our freedom of speech?" Graydon demanded. "Rafe Mair's talk show is so plugged up with Lower Mainland calls it is impossible for northwesterners to get through."

"I would like to challenge Mr. Mair to come up to the north and broadcast live from a local studio," he said. "Perhaps then we can get our concerns on the table and Mr. Mair can talk face-to-face with the men and women whose livelihoods are on the cutting block."

Graydon said the motion was meant as a "tongue-in-cheek thing" aimed at getting southerners to pay attention to the concerns of this region.

"I don't know what all the fuss is about," he said.

Meanwhile, Skeena Broadcasters officials say they have no plans to abide by council's wishes and pull the plug on Mair.

The talk show is carried here on CJFW FM.

"Productivity here today is at an all-time low," Skeena Broadcasters' Tim McLean said after hearing of the council resolution. "The staff is in complete hysterics."

Rafe Mair could not be reached for comment. CKNW staff said he's out of the country on vacation for another two weeks.

City switches money duties

CITY COUNCIL has voted to invest its money with the Municipal Finance Authority (MFA), rather than have city treasurer Keith Norman manage a separate portfolio.

Norman said he's able to beat the return than the MFA.

But council wasn't sure the extra money Norman generates is worth the time he spends to achieve those returns.

Over six months, Norman's investments brought in $129,000 in interest for the city, compared to the equivalent period MFA return of $116,000.

Up to $7 million was invested during that period. That's not any secret stash of money squirreled away, though.

The city gets a large influx of cash in June when property tax payments come in. Much of that money is invested because it is spent gradually over the course of the year.

Kids know the best playgrounds

IT'S THAT TIME of year when parents start to consider moving to a new home.

If you have a good real estate agent they will drive past the elementary school before they start showing you homes.

So how do you know if the school is a good one or not?

They know a good playground when they see one. Although they have only attended one school, they have tested out many playgrounds.

The playground is the most visible part of a school. Acres of grass allocated for children to play team sports on, or just run around.

But most young children do not play team sports or run around aimlessly.

The keen observer will notice that the children are congregated around the play equipment area. This is the heart of the playground and therefore of the great school.

Equipment areas come in two types, traditional and modern.

The traditional ones have things which parents remember from their childhood, like swings, slides, teeter-totters and monkey bars. Even these have changed.

The slides curl around in a spiral instead of going straight down. Swings have rubber seats instead of a slab of wood.

Monkey bars are brightly coloured curved structures instead of simple climbing blocks.

Teeter-totters are becoming rare.

Maybe it's because the ride required cooperation between two children and when one child stops cooperating the other ends up with a sore bottom, or gnashed feet.

Maybe school administrators see them as potential liability suits.

It's strange that the only thing which hasn't changed much is the roundabout. Who invented a ride where you push someone around and around until they throw up? Not a pretty sight.

However, on a field trip I helped chaperon last summer, this appeared to be the highlight. It won out over climbing about in a gravel pit and sliding down a muddy hillside. I will leave the educational value of all this activity for another time.

The modern playground is the one with the adventure playground built of wood, old tires and chains.

This is the one your children invite you to join them on and you reach the top before you realize that you are no longer four feet tall and the reason you didn't join the navy was because you were terrified of the prospect of having to use a breeches buoy.

The latter is of course the highlight of any good adventure area.

These structures, which appear to be little more than recycled castoffs, are very expensive. The cheap plastic tube slide at my son's school was broken by vandals a few years ago and the school asked the parents' council to replace it. It seemed like a simple request until they priced it. The event increased by satisfaction with the traditional playground.

It is interesting to note that children, who say they hate to go to school, will go as far as the school playground on an evening or Saturday without any parental pressure.

If we could find some way to increase the educational value of playgrounds beyond learning socialization skills and the law of gravity, the potential for knowledge expansion may be endless.

Dr. Reg Horne is a member of the University of Northern British Columbia, Faculty of Natural Resources and Environmental Studies, based in Terrace.

Invasion of the Cooking Monsters

"WASH YOUR hands, gentlemen," Mark Hoeftling tells a couple of gooey-handed new recruits in best drill-sergeant fashion. "No food fights."

It's a quiet Saturday in the college cafeteria and a baker's dozen of 11- to 13-year-olds mill around the food preparation area armed with whisks, mixing bowls and paring knives.

They have arrived not to devour, but to create.

Hoeftling, the college's cooking program instructor, is leading the proceedings in Northwest Community College's "Cooking Monsters" learn-to-cook program for kids.

The young chefs — in equal numbers of boys and girls — struggle to separate eggs, convert ounces, and measure ingredients.

Hoeftling shouts directions amid the activity.

"Don't beat it too much or you'll turn it into butter," he advises.

He turns and stoops to check

YOUNG CHEFS descended on the Northwest Community College cafeteria for a weekend of cooking fun two weekends ago.

one team's recipe conversion math.

"Who changed this recipe," he interrogates. "This should be one ounce of Kahlua, not three ounces."

An honest error, doubtless.

By the end of the day a luncheon fit for a king is readied.

There's quiche, Caesar salad, and frozen Kahlua souffle, served in hollowed out oranges.

The parents arrive at noon Sunday and are treated to a spectacular brunch.

"It was fun," says Hoeftling. "The kids were very excited about serving their folks and their friends and brothers and sisters."

The Caesar dressing needed a little work, he added, but the quiche was surprisingly good.

"All the parents seemed very impressed that the cafeteria was still standing — that none of them had burned it down or lost a limb in the process," Hoeftling laughed.

African band fuses styles

A WEST AFRICAN musician brings his energetic sound to Terrace this weekend.

Alpha Yaya Diallo and the rest of Bafing — his six piece band — fuse traditional rhythms with modern funk, jazz and Afro beats. Diallo sings in Sous Sous, Malinke, Foulah, French and some English.

Known for his tight guitar work, Diallo is a multi-instrumentalist who also plays Balafon and Djembe.

Born in Conakry, Guinea, Diallo now makes his home in Vancouver.

They're playing at the Thornhill Community Centre on Friday, Feb. 24 at 8 p.m.

Ultrasound is on the way

AN NEW ULTRASOUND unit for Mills Memorial Hospital is on the way.

Alex Houlden of the Dr. R.E.M. Lee Hospital Foundation said the high-tech unit has been ordered and the foundation has it more than half paid for.

The organization has $110,000 earmarked for the unit.

The cost is expected to be $174,000.

The foundation had some money left after it finished its mega-fundraiser — the $650,000 Mills Memorial CT Scanner — and decided to tackle an ultrasound next.

The old one will still be used, but the new model has better scoping capabilities and is expected to be better suited to pregnancy and obstetrical work.

"Fundraising in this town is just spectacular," Houlden added.

Library drive nearing goal

THE LIBRARY IS three-quarters of the way toward raising $87,000 in cash and kind for its expansion project.

The library board last year committed itself to raising the money to fill the gap between the expansion cost and available money.

Helping get the total to $65,000 last week were donations from Finning Ltd., the Royal Bank and Pacific Northern Gas.

Also recognized were Skeena Cellulose and Skeena Sawmills for contributing lumber.

Tolsec received thanks for contributing labour and material.

"When we found we were $87,000 we decided to pick up the challenge as the final piece to make the project succeed," said library board member George Clark to company representatives at a short ceremony last week.

"We've now topped the $60,000 level. We're not cocky but we're feeling confident we'll meet the target," he said.

Clark added that the library board's commitment enabled the city to spend other monies on items that were taken out of

The Pacific Northern Gas contribution is $2,500 this year and $2,500 in 1996. The same contribution amounts and timetable is being made by the Royal Bank.

Finning Ltd.'s contribution is $5,000 for this year.

The lumber donated by

Skeena Cellulose and Skeena Sawmills is part of the $65,000 raised so far.

The Tolsec contribution of $6,000 in labour, a security system and telecommunications material isn't part of the $65,000 figure but did enable the library to have items deleted when the budget was cut, said Clark.

In the meantime, the library is now open after being closed for a week to move shelves and books from the old space into the addition.

Workers are now renovating the existing section and the project is expected to be finished this spring.

HOMELESS HOUND 'Patches' is in need of some family after recovering from recent injuries at the Terrace Veterinary Medical Centre. The six-month-old Benji-lookalike was in poor condition after he was hit by a car on Tuck Ave. Nov. 15. Anonymous contributors paid for his surgery and vet clinic staff — pictured above — looked after him for 40 days free of charge. Patches has gone through a series of near-adoptions, but hasn't quite found a home yet. He's got up to date shots and neutering is paid for, though not yet done. Patches gets along well with kids and other dogs. You can visit him at the Terrace Animal Shelter.

Water Facts

Ice

Have you noticed particles trapped in your ice cubes? More than likely what you are seeing is sediment particles from your tap water. Dirty water can clog the ice machine in your refrigerator. If your water is heavily chlorinated you may notice a 'swimming pool' odour to the ice. As ice freezes the excess chlorine escapes. This chlorine can mix with any water vapour in your freezer creating a mild hydrochloric acid. This acid can corrode any metal parts in your freezer.

Ice has a tendency to pick up many different odours from your freezer. Ice made from purified water does not add unwanted flavours to your favourite drink. To ensure you have the best tasting ice cubes be sure to make a new batch just before company comes over or once every two weeks.

WOLF CUB David Russell is one of 230 youths and adults in the scouting movement in Terrace.

Cub fun highlights Scout/Guide Week

THE BEST part of being in cubs is the travelling and camping, says 10-year-old David Russell.

"You get to go to different places, meet other people, and trade badges," he says.

David is one of the 230 youths and adults in the scouting movement in Terrace who are celebrating Scout/Guide week this week.

"It's really interesting. You get to do lots of fun crafts and get to go places," he says.

David has now got his First Aider badge and he's working on his blue star and tawny star.

The annual Cub car rally is another high point of the year for cubs like David.

At last year's cub car tournament, he came in third in Terrace and advanced to the regional meet, where he finished 14th.

David is also a keeo — a bridge member from cubs to beavers.

He acts as a kind of a junior leader to help beavers learn new skills and stay organized.

And there's no doubt what David will be doing when he turns 11.

"I'm going to become a scout."

Cub leader Charles Johnstone says they try to teach cubs independence, a sense of assurance, and help build confidence.

"In beavers, the aim is just to cooperate together as a group," he said. "And in scouting there's a lot more independence yet."

Recent activities have included law awareness, emergency preparedness, first aid, winter cubbing and outdoor survival.

"Most of the program centres around the outdoors," says Johnstone.

Celebrations this week include a parade on Wednesday starting at 6:30 p.m. from Knox United Church to Veritas School, where they'll hold a campfire and investiture of new cubs into each pack.

Education week finale

EDUCATION WEEK winds down with a series of events at local schools.

On Wednesday there is a school band performance at 7 p.m. at the R.E.M. Lee Theatre. Then starting at 7:30 p.m. guest speaker Tarry Grieve will speak on "K-12 Program: Where Have We Been and Where we are Going."

Thursday features multicultural events at Uplands Elementary School starting at 1:30 p.m.

That night, the Skeena Jr. Secondary school band, under the direction of Colleen Bruce, performs at 7 p.m. at the R.E.M. Lee Theatre. Then at 7:30 p.m. at the theatre, Owen Corcoran speaks on "Reporting on Student Progress — What Parents Want to Know."

Friday features a science and technology open house at Thornhill Elementary School. At Thornhill Primary, there will be panel discussions and speakers throughout the school from 8:45 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

BRITISH COLUMBIANS TURN IDEAS INTO ACTION WITH HELP FROM PARTNERS IN PROGRESS

All over the province, ideas that benefit the agriculture, fisheries and food industries are becoming realities with the help of Partners in Progress—a program of the B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

By teaming up with industry or community partners, cooperative partner groups are achieving their goals of solving problems, creating new markets, expanding opportunities, increasing profitability and improving overall viability.

Partners in Progress is helping industry and community partner groups by contributing funds to provide opportunities to put good ideas into action.

Eligible applicants include: farmers, fishers, food processors, distributors, associations, local businesses, community groups, and others who want to work together in partnership with B.C.'s agri-business, fisheries and food sectors.

If you want to know more about this program and don't want to miss your opportunity to apply for 1995/96 funding, contact your local Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food office or call the Ministry office in Victoria at 387-5122 and we'll send you an application package.

IN HOUSE FINANCING

They're Brazil bound

TERRACE'S Megan Brophy and Carmen Lucier have left behind their Terrace homes and families to serve the poor in Brazil.

When the right opportunity came up, both girls just dropped everything in their lives in Terrace for Brazil.

And after months of preparations — to get passports, visas, and many needles — Megan and Carmen left the Vancouver airport Feb. 8 to live with the Catholic Order of Sisters in a Brazilian community about the same size as Terrace.

They join Sister Maria Raposa, a Terrace girl, already there.

Maria is part of the Missionaries of the Poor, a Diocesan order of sisters located in the state of Golas in Brazil.

Maria is now the mother superior of the mission.

Both Megan and Carmen will be working with the poor, especially working with children, teaching them English and other needs.

Both Megan and Carmen attended Veritas School from Grade 1-7.

Carmen last year graduated from Caledonia.

After Veritas, Megan graduated from the O'Grady Catholic High School in Prince George and later attended the University of Northern B.C. for one semester.

The convent and residence where Megan and Carmen will live is called Aldeia-Da-Paz, which means House of Peace.

Megan and Carmen will likely be there for six months, perhaps longer.

We hope in a couple of months to hear from them and

Challenge teams get ready

ORGANIZERS HERE of an athletic challenge between Terrace and Prince Rupert already have half of the team needed for the event.

The challenge is called a marasportation and monies raised go toward B.C.'s Children's Hospital in Vancouver.

It involves participation in eight athletic endeavours over a continuous 24-hour period.

Six team members met last week for a briefing on the March 18-19 event to be held in Prince Rupert.

Prince Rupert organizer Doug Kydd said he's pleased with the response.

"We've held this before in Prince Rupert for the children's hospital but this is the first time we've ventured outside for a challenge between cities," Kydd noted.

He said the children's hospital is a worthy recipient because while based in Vancouver, it serves children from all over the province.

One such example took place here in January when a hospital team held an EEG clinic at Mills Memorial Hospital.

Last year there were 133 visits to the hospital from Terrace and area children and 138 visits from Prince Rupert.

The events this time are curling, dancercize, aquabasketball, hockey, bowling, indoor soccer, volleyball and basketball.

Previous marasportations in Prince Rupert have featured only male participants but this time women are included.

Each team has 12 members and while they will be out collecting pledges, other donations are welcome, said Kydd.

One of the more venturesome of the events is dancercize.

It's to take place in conjunction with the Ladies Marine Bonspiel Social.

Participants will be auctioned off and they'll dance non-stop for an hour with those who took part in the auction.

Those who want more information can contact Steve Scott (he's the city's recreation director) at 638-4750.

MEGAN BROPHY and Carmen Lucier sign their customs declarations at the Vancouver airport Feb. 8 before flying to take up missionary life in Brazil.

find out how they're surviving the many insects there.

I'm sure this will be a great learning experience for both.

Best of luck, girls, from everyone in Terrace.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Cuts threaten all we've gained

Dear Sir:

After 10 years of being out of school I finally decided to go back and make a better life for myself and my daughter.

At 15 I was one who thought I was invincible and left home while I thought I still knew everything.

One day reality set in and I found that neither assumption was true. A year ago, just about to the day, I hit the all time low of my life.

The details are unimportant but the realization and acknowledgment that it was the lowest that I wanted to go, was the turning point in my life, in our lives.

The start of the climb out of my hole was slow, I was unable to start school, at the local college, until September.

This made my new start a long way off. I now think this was a blessing in disguise. It gave me a chance to re-build my relationship with my daughter which was not so acceptable before.

Incidentally, we had an excellent summer and overcame all obstacles and now have a terrific relationship.

Finally September came and I eagerly headed to the bus stop to begin a new life. The first day was over whelming, after all it was a long time since I sat at a desk and took notes from a teacher.

It didn't take long to settle into the academic schedule and campus life. As a matter of fact I rather enjoyed it. I located a group of good people to hang out with and picked out the brainy ones in my classes to assist me in times of problems. This turned out to be a good base, as I was receiving good marks for the work I was doing.

After overcoming a few setbacks in my home life, I was all the more determined to succeed in my endeavors. A dream had become an obsession. With the determination showing in my marks, my confidence level and self esteem soared to a new all time high. I am now doing university credit courses which is also a new all time high. The work is tough but I know I can do it.

I've done all of this on my own but I couldn't have done it all by myself. I had help from some very special people (you know who you are), to them I say thanks a million.

Today I made a scary discovery. Due to the possibility of government cut backs I may not be able to fulfill my goal of becoming a psychologist.

You see my schooling is paid for the government and I am really scared that all of this progress I have made will be for naught. I've gone from someone who was ready to end my life to someone who wants to be the best she can be.

Once again I didn't do it all on my own. I had help from the very government that wants take it away. If the government does that then I will be right back to square one.

I may still have the self esteem that has built over the past year, but how long will that last if I can't get a job or the education to get a job.

Please help me, and the many that are in a similar position, to hang on to what will change our lives and the future of Canada.

Please write or call MP Mike Scott and Lloyd Axworthy to show your support in the future of young Canadians. Stop cuts to education.

FAIR AND OPEN NEGOTIATIONS
WILL HELP US
SETTLE LAND CLAIMS.

When negotiations begin, three negotiating teams will be at the table to represent everyone's interests. There will be a team from the B.C. government, one from the federal government and one from the First Nation.

These teams will identify what will be negotiated and could include issues such as:

- interests in Crown land and resources
- economic development opportunities
- defining self-government
- financial compensation
- taxation options on treaty lands
- protection of heritage sites and artifacts.

The three teams will work openly within this negotiating framework to reach an agreement-in-principle which outlines the broad terms of a proposed settlement.

All British Columbians will have the opportunity to review and comment on the agreement-in-principle before a treaty is finalized. All agreements must be debated and ratified by the B.C. legislature.

WHAT POSITION WILL B.C. TAKE IN THESE NEGOTIATIONS?

B.C. will follow a clearly defined set of guiding principles throughout all treaty negotiations.

- Negotiations must be as open and inclusive as possible.
- Private property is not on the table.
- Treaties must be affordable to B.C. taxpayers.

- The federal government has the primary constitutional and financial responsibility for treaties.
- Treaties must maintain your access to hunting, fishing and recreation.

- Fair compensation will be paid for unavoidable disruption of commercial interests.
- First Nations and local government jurisdiction must be clearly spelled out.
- Province-wide standards of resource management and environmental protection must be maintained.

For more information about land claims call 1-800-880-1022 or write to:

REAL ESTATE

Elegant family home boasts many features

Plan no. U-890
BY M. TYNAN

A combination stucco and brick exterior features a multi-level roof with gables, and arched feature windows.

Enter into a foyer brightened by an overhead window. A half-wall provides a subtle separation between the entrance hall and the living room. A vaulted ceiling in the living room adds a stylish touch, as does a boxed-out window seat set into a feature window. A french door between the dining room and kitchen allows for a more private atmosphere for entertaining. A "U" shaped counter in the kitchen provides an efficient working space with an open counter to service the breakfast area. A large family room complete with a cosy fireplace offers a comfortable area for informal gatherings.

A deluxe bedroom area includes a large games room with a vaulted ceiling and feature windows. The master bedroom has his and hers walk-in closets and a four piece ensuite with a raised swirl tub.

An unfinished basement awaits your own creative touch.

U-890 may be obtained for $440.00 for a package of five complete sets of working prints and $39.00 for each additional set of the same plan. Allow $15.00 extra to cover the cost of postage and handling (B.C. residents add applicable sales tax to plan total) (All Canadian residents add 7% GST to plan total plus postage and handling).

This is one of our new designs. Many innovative plans are now available in our home plan catalogue for $13.85 including postage and handling and 7% GST.

Please make all cheques, money orders, and Visa or MasterCard authorizations payable to: The Terrace Standard Plan of the Week, 13659 - 108th Avenue, Surrey, B.C., V3T 2K4.

BURN SMART

TO MINIMIZE AIR POLLUTION FROM YOUR WOODSTOVE:

Burn only small, bright fires. Start the fire using small pieces of wood kindling, and keep the fire moderately hot, adding larger pieces of split wood as required. Do not damper down the fire too much, as this will produce a smoky, oxygen-starved fire.

We need to love each other all year long

By GARTH FRIESEN
ONCE AGAIN, Valentine's Day has come and gone, as it has for untold decades (much to the dismay of romantics everywhere).

Chocolates have been consumed in massive quantities, flowers have wilted, and Hallmark is busy tallying unimaginable sales.

Now why is it that we as a society tend to relegate our virtues to only one specific day of the calendar year?

Yesterday we expressed our love to our sweethearts. We will honor our parents on May 7 and June 18 this year, we'll be thankful on October 9th, and we'll be generous and hospitable on December 25.

It doesn't seem right. In all fairness, it's wonderful that we set aside special days throughout the year to pay special attention to those things which form the fabric of our society.

Here's a suggestion, however, that will revolutionize our country: In addition to loving, and giving, and thanking, and honoring on the days set aside for these things, let's practise these virtues ALL YEAR LONG!

One of peoples' most basic needs is the need to feel loved by someone, yet how many feel lonely and uncared for, even though they're surrounded by people day in and day out. Newborn babies, if they are deprived of loving human contact, gain weight slowly, get sick often, and will sometimes even die.

The power of love truly makes a dramatic difference in our world.

Jesus said that the two most important commandments were to love God and to love your neighbor as you love yourself (Matthew 22). Imagine what our world would be like if we put these words into practise.

Our penal system would be unnecessary. We could leave our doors unlocked. The residents at Terraceview Lodge wouldn't have enough time to accommodate all their visitors.

The Volunteer Bureau would have to hire more staff to keep up.

Neighbors would pool their resources to take down fences, rather than putting them up. The possibilities are endless.

A perfect world will never be realized this side of heaven, of course, but let's give it our best shot!

A good place to begin is to recognize the year-round love that we do witness from day to day.

The parent who helps out in their child's classroom.

The hot meal brought to a grieving family. A truck load of firewood for the ailing widow.

Even a warm smile and cheerful "hello" to a complete stranger. These may seem trivial to some, but to the recipient of such acts of love, these small kindnesses warm the heart and meet a very practical need: the need to be loved.

So let's enjoy and celebrate special days such as Valentine's, but let's love one another the other 364 days of the year as well.

The need is tremendous, but if we all do our part, we really could revolutionize our country. So what will your part be?

Garth Friesen is youth pastor of the Alliance Church. Viewpoint is a column written on behalf of the Terrace Ministerial Association. The opinions are those of the authors.

Terrace reunion planned

IF YOU know anybody from Terrace now living in the lower mainland or on Vancouver Island, give them a call or write a letter.

That's because a number of former Terrace residents are planning a reunion this May in Vancouver.

The idea grew out of a 25-year high school reunion held here last year, says organizer Margo Bates.

"Within a short period of time and without any planning, we already have more than a 150 people interested," said Bates last week. "It's amazing how many people know other people living down here."

Bates herself is a good example. She's married to Russ Froese, one of the new anchors for the Vancouver-based UTV television station. He got his broadcasting start here in Terrace through Bates' father, Art Bates. Russ was in a band here called the Jurymen later renamed Mother Pig.

"Several of the band members are now living in Vancouver and it's almost like we're back to where we used to be," Bates notes. Those interested in the reunion can call Bates at 604-299-9177 and leave a message.

Where are bears?

WE POWERED into Whidbey Reach. The seascape changed dramatically. Immense edifices, wet and shining under the intense rays of the sun, looked as if they had thrust up moments earlier, dripping, from the sea.

Falls rushed down striated battlements then leaped into the salt water. Bruce pulled up to the base of a slide chute, fastened the painter to a rock outcrop, then we scrambled up to fill empty coolers with blue ice chipped from the base of the avalanche. That done, we set out again, passing the ancient village site at Miskusa, then past waving fields of estuary grass before picking our way through the shallow sandbars of the Kitlope. We transferred the gear to an aluminum jet sled a short ways upriver.

The broad flood plain of the Kitlope opened before us. The chiseled features of Mount Blanc, its upper crest edged with glacier and snow, stood out boldly beside the rest of the Kitlope Range, and a domed sky. Here was a sister to the Kitimat River; these were the contours of Haisla's home river before development. "This," shouted Bruce, "is what B.C. was." I nodded in agreement.

The wreckage of a tin boat lay in shallow water alongside the gravel strand the Haisla know as the place that holds winter. A few miles from the river's mouth a small stream of clear water began to mix with the gray, glacial water of the Kitlope. Bruce angled to starboard and picked up the trail. The gray water turned green. Bruce eased back on the throttle. The long dark shapes of chinook salmon, large and unmistakable, scattered before us. "Spawners," I shouted. Bruce navigated the turn into a long lake framed by precipitous rock walls: a miniature of the ocean geography we'd left an hour before. "The sockeye are here," he said. They had to be, the shiny, black heads of seals dotted the outflow of the lake. We slid the jet boat onto the first sandy beach I'd seen in the course of our journey, at a spot called A-Koo-U-Wa.

Bruce called my attention to a ramshackle encampment behind the camp set up for the Haisla Rediscovery Program. "That's Harry McGowan's old Camp. He's sold it to another group now." According to Bruce this camp was a bone in the throat to the Haisla who see trophy hunting as lurid and vile pursuit — a violation of sacred principles. Yet there was a spotting scope set up on the food preparation table amid some hunting magazines advertising trips to far-flung places for exotic hunting. The spotter came out to greet us dressed in the muddy colours of the hunt. It turned out he and his pal were stranded when they slammed their boat into a gravel bar. Their boss knew of their predicament and was on his way with help.

I listened as Bruce told the hunter and his buddy that their boss had bought himself a giant problem along with the hunting rights to giant bears. The Haisla had discovered evidence of bear baiting. On one trip Henaaksiala Elders returned to their ancient home and discovered bear guts floating in the favoured swimming spot of their children. The Haisla — not big on sport at the best of times — were sickened at the sight of a hunter crouching behind a blind, waiting for a bear to amble down the Tezwa River beach to feed on spawning salmon.

The next day was filled with thoughts of bears. I walked up the river the Haisla call Klas-su-dees, waded the deep riffles twice, and found myself at the edge of deep pool. The water was clear but it was impossible to see the bottom through the undulant mass of scarlet sockeye. I looked for bear tracks in the sand. There were none. This seemed an excellent spot for bear to fish. I looked more carefully on my way downstream, up side channels, at the mouths of small creeks, but it was on the lower floor of the stream — at the confluence of Klas-su-dees and the Tezwa — that I found spoor: black bear tracks, old ones at that. Bear sign is plentiful on all salmon streams I know, yet here, far away from roads, a hundred miles from the nearest city there appeared to be very few. In two days I didn't spot one bear — black or grizzly.

On the trip out we saw no Grizzlies on an estuary that has all the features of the famed Khutzeymateen. They were there in numbers only a short time ago, as the Haisla can attest.

Shortly after that trip, the provincial government, at the urging of the Haisla, placed a one year moratorium on bear hunting in the Kitlope. Presumably this will give the Ministry of the Environment, Lands and Parks some time to analyze the situation. A year doesn't seem long enough. The Kitlope should be off limits to bear hunters until we can determine whether the bears there should be hunted at all. Or, at least until we can provide them adequate protection from poachers.

Enough is enough

THERE'S A limit, even for the Terrace Timbemen.

Noting it had been a number of years since the local Old-timers had won a divisional title at their own tournament, club president John Taylor admitted, "We've been generous hosts."

But at this year's 15th annual event the team obviously decided the time had come to put those impulses aside and revisit top spot.

And they did it in style. After edging Terrace Convoy 3-2 in their opener, the Timbemen clubbed Hazelton

8-3 to set up the finale against the Smithers Old Stockers, also undefeated to that point.

And Smithers were on the way to maintaining that record until late in the game.

With the Old Stockers up 2-1, the Timbemen began to exert unrelenting pressure, controlling the play and launching attack after attack.

The Smithers defence finally cracked — twice. Those two goals and a brilliant last minute save put away the Coho division for the Timbemen.

It was Smithers' turn in the Steelhead division where the Drillers were smooth against the Prince Rupert Wrinkles, chopped down the Okies then undercut the Kitimat Merchants to go 3-0.

Kitimat got their turn in the Sockeye, the North Stars Molson Golden Oldies proving they were as long on talent as their name by defeating Prince Rupert, Smithers and Stewart squads to cruise to the title.

In the past victory has meant some kind of keepsake for each player — medallion, T-shirt, etc.

This year, however, Taylor said the club wanted to do something different. So it donated $500 to the Second Sheet of Ice Society in the name of the three winners.

"It went over really well," Taylor said of the players' reaction to the idea.

Corporate donations also allowed many players to go home with everything from new hockey sticks to helmets to tape. There were even four videos courtesy of Don Cherry.

The Smithers Rubberpuckers earned the Most Sportsman-like Team award.

WITH THE Smithers defenceman down and out, Terrace Timbemen's #22 pulls the trigger on the equalizing goal on the way to a 3-2 victory and division title.

Nationals intro goes as planned

Kevin Andolfatto

KEVIN ANDOLFATTO didn't bring back any medals from the Junior National Swim Championships, but he came home a winner in the eyes of Blueback coach Mike Carlyle.

With 100 per cent best times, fractionally missing a consolation final qualifying time and the title of fastest 14-year-old at the meet, the assessment is not surprising.

The age range for the Juniors is 19 years and under and most of Andolfatto's rivals were 16-17 years old. The body has matured by then, Carlyle noted, giving the older swimmers an edge in strength.

Andolfatto's best performance at the Victoria championships came in the 100m Breast where he came into the meet ranked #34 with a best time of 1:12.44.

By the time the race was over, he'd lowered that time by more than two seconds and moved up to #19 in Canada.

The faster time also allowed Andolfatto to re-qualify for the Youth Nationals in May. Carlyle explained requalification was necessary because the required time had been lowered since his previous qualifying swim. Not only had Andolfatto broken the new mark, he did it with more than a second to spare.

He also took a chunk out of his personal bests in both his other events, three seconds over the 200m Breast and four seconds in the 200m IM. In doing so he also moved up significantly in the rankings to #39 and #76 respectively.

Carlyle said the meet was a good opportunity for Andolfatto to experience what competition at this level is like. As a result, he'll know what to expect at the Youths, he added.

The long range plan is for Andolfatto to make consolations in the '96 Youths and finals the following year, his last of eligibility (the Youths age range is 16 and under).

Promise kept
it's BCs now

JP LEBREQUE kept his promise.

Following a second place finish in the final meet before the zones, Lebreque promised he would return from the regional showdown with the gold.

Which is just what he did, winning an exciting match in overtime and booking a berth at the provincials.

Also heading for the BC championship will be Greg Buck. Ranked #4 in the province, Buck had to take on Jay Clark in the zone final.

Rated the province's best in his class, Clark beat out Buck but only by a 4-2 margin.

Other strong zone performances on the boys side included Ajit Jaswal shaking off his second place finish last time out - his only loss of the season - to take top spot.

James Bohn showed great improvement, losing out in a tough gold medal match while Larry McCarthy picked up a third place finish.

The girls team were as impressive as ever at the zones, all qualifying for the provincials.

Michelle Genereaux and Jamie Striker didn't even have to step on to the mat to win gold, both taking their division uncontested.

Tanya Daigneault put in an exceptionally strong performance, defeating her arch rival from Kitwanga only to lose the gold to a Smithers opponent she had never wrestled before.

And it was the same story for Rosa Mikaloff who overpowered her Prince Rupert rival only to be surprised in the final.

In a tough weight class Kathleen Marsh acquitted herself well to take bronze while Karyn Audet and Babal Sanghera each finished fourth.

Once again the girls couldn't quite tally enough points to deprive Hazelton of the team crown at the zones.

However, they continued to impress for a squad that only started wrestling this season.

The provincials contenders left today and hope their Monday return will be brightened by a few medals.

■ Playmaker

THE MOST points — 18 in five games — and least penalty minutes earned Clayton Heenan the Playmaker Award at a recent Atoms House tournament in Kitimat. The Terrace Drifters were impressive in finishing second in the 16-team tourney, Houston taking the title.

PeeWees pull off double

THE SKEENA Cellulose PeeWee Reps are Tri-City league champs for the second year in a row.

And they took the title in convincing style, pounding home-icers Prince Rupert 13-2 in their opener then wrapping it up with a comfortable 6-2 win over Kitimat.

Now the team is turning its sights on next month's provincial championships, to be held in Squamish.

Apart from any practicing, that also means the players are also having to devote time to raising money to cover the cost of the trip.

Last weekend it was a bottle drive and this Saturday they'll be seen around the downtown area for their Tag Day.

Team members (pictured

A road too long

THE BACK DOOR route can sometimes be just too long.

Thornhill made that tiring discovery at the Jr. 'B' Girls Zones held at Bulkley Valley Christian School.

Sent to the 'B' side by Centennial Christian, Thornhill had to win three off the reel — including a rematch against CCS — to make the final.

And then go straight back out on court for the final.

Even so, the Wolverines stayed in the hunt until the final quarter. But with the score tied at 22, exhaustion took over and BVCS ran up 10 unanswered points for the title.

Thornhill had opened with a 32-26 win over Smithers 'A', then watched local rivals Centennial triumph 44-41 in an overtime thriller against Kitwanga.

That brought the pair face-to-face in another one that was close until Thornhill ran into foul trouble late, allowing CCS to pull clear 28-21.

The win sent Centennial to the 'A' side semi in the double knockout event where they faced Bulkley Valley.

A see-saw game throughout, the tide finally turned against the Terrace team in the last five minutes, BVCS taking it 31-24.

Meanwhile on the 'B' side Thornhill had begun their drive, pummeling Smithers

'B' 40-19, then defending the lead built up in an explosive second quarter to eliminate Hazelton 35-27.

Which put CCS and the Wolverines back on court vying for a berth in the final.

Centennial showed excellent early jump, building a 10-2 lead only to have Thornhill haul back to even early in the second quarter.

From there the momentum swung back and forth, Thornhill opening a four point lead early in the fourth which was quickly erased by a three basket string from CCS.

Centennial took the lead twice more before the end but the Wolverines came through when it counted for a 30-29 victory.

"It was an excellent game with very few fouls," commented CCS coach Curtis Tuininga.

And he sympathized with the uphill task Thornhill had faced in the final.

Kristen Petevello and Alyssa Wyatt of Thornhill were named to the All-Star team as was Megan Henderson of CCS.

Wyatt led Wolverine scorers with 36 — the fifth highest of the tourney — followed by Aeron Reid (27) and Petevello (24). For Centennial, Liza Vandevelde sank 27, Henderson 20 and Andrea VanGelder 15.

On golden ice?

WHEN THE puck drops for the Zone 7 Female Under-18 Hockey opener at the B.C. Winter Games, two Terrace players will be in the line-up.

Kelly Prinz, 16, a member of the local Kermodei Classics ladies team and Lindsay Smith, 13, a minor hockey PeeWee House player made the grade following a 28 player tryout held in Kitimat.

Smith already boasts a Games medal, a bronze as a member of the PeeWee team at the Northern B.C. Winter Games held earlier this month.

The B.C. Winter Games get under way in Comox tomorrow with 63 Terrace athletes competing in badminton, wheelchair basketball, bowling, boxing, figure skating, hockey — male and female — karate, luge, ringette, alpine skiing and swimming.

OT too much

THE LAST five minutes proved just too much for the Skeena Grade 8 Girls basketball team Feb. 12.

Facing a very talented Hazelton squad, Skeena gave as good as they got through four quarters of regulation time, the score being tied at 49.

That set up the five minute overtime period and Hazelton were able to put the game away 61-56.

ONE OF a kind. Above left to right, skip Kathie Simpson, third Kathy Hadley, second Gail Sheasby and lead Jackie Munson provided host Terrace with its only event winner at this year's Valentines Bonspiel, edging Weir of Kitimat 7-6.

Simpson saves day

IT'S WHY skips get paid the big bucks.

Final end, one down and lying one with the hammer. Your mission — and you have no choice but to accept it — is to pull off a delicate bump on the opposition's second shot rock to take the deuce.

And Kathie Simpson executed brilliantly to take C Event at the Ladies Valentines Bonspiel 7-6.

In doing so, Simpson, third Kathy Hadley, second Gail Sheasby and lead Jackie Munson, provided the crowd with the only hometown victory to cheer.

The finals had begun with Terrace looking in good shape with a team in every event.

The D Event was the first to be taken away when Johanson of Prince Rupert took full advantage of the problems being experienced by Faye Sparks' quartet, winning 7-0 in four.

On sheet 2 Marg Skead's hopes effectively vanished in the sixth through the unluckiest of circumstances.

With Skead up 3-2 and lying one, opposing skip Liz Duri of Smithers underthrew her takeout attempt leaving Skead to throw the guard for an almost certain steal.

But with the rock on its way for perfect positioning, one of Skead's sweepers slipped, turning the rock as she fell.

That left Duri with an open takeout which she made this time for five.

A steal of three in the next gave Duri an insurmountable cushion, Skead conceding after nine down 13-6.

Terrace hopes were alive until the end in the main event where Kim McDougall was attempting to make it three consecutive 'A' titles.

Up 4-3 after four, McDougall appeared to get a lock on it with a trio in the next. But she overthrew her hammer draw in the sixth leaving Jenny McLean of Prince Rupert a takeout for three of her own.

McLean had another chance for three in the ninth but couldn't pull it off this time to send the game into the last tied.

There McDougall had only to hit with her hammer to make the hat trick but threw inside to give McLean the win, 9-8.

Debbie Carruthers of Terrace took third in 'A' ahead of Karen Myer of Prince Rupert while Penny Brown (Rupert) and Kathy Gardiner (Terrace) filled those spots in 'B'.

Patti Weir of Kitimat was the losing finalist in 'C', locals Sylvia Griffith and Nancy Spensley taking third and fourth.

And in 'D', Stephanie Weber of Terrace finished in third ahead of Marilyn Wiers of Kitimat.

Mullen hits the 1000 mark

Forty-two players have scored 1,000 points in the NHL. For all of them, the accomplishment is monumental and difficult. Add 'improbable' to the description of the 42nd on the list because he comes from a place where it's still hard to find any blue lines on the ice.

Joe Mullen collected his 1,000th point when he assisted on John Cullen's second-period goal Feb. 7 against Florida. He became the first American-born player to join the exclusive club and, while there may be others from the U.S., it's hard to imagine anyone else will come from Hell's Kitchen. That's a neighborhood in New York City, even if it does aptly describe the front of the net where he's spent the last 13 seasons.

Mullen is from Manhattan's west side and while kids his age in Canada were out on the pond, he was skating in the streets on rollers — the old four-wheeled kind, not the new ones with leather boots and shock absorbers.

"I think it's been a big part of my success," he reflected the other day on his youth before the ice age. "It was a way to keep playing hockey every day. When I was real young there was no ice hockey in New York but then at age 10 or 11, Emile Francis of the Rangers started an ice-hockey program for kids, but you still couldn't play very much."

Mullen made the most of every minute he had on blades of steel or wheel and by the late 70s, he was a 30-goal scorer for the Boston College Eagles and the United States was putting together its hockey team for the Lake Placid Olympics.

"My dad took sick at the time," says Joe of his father, who worked at Madison Square Garden. "I tried to help my family out so when I was coming out of college it was either turn pro and make some money or go to the Olympics. I decided to turn pro."

The Olympic team performed a miracle that Joe calls the biggest

by Jim Hughson

influence on U.S. hockey, but his performance in the ensuing years has been nothing short of heroic in itself.

He got his start in St. Louis but made his mark in Calgary. The trade that sent him to the Flames laid the foundation for their cup win in 1989 but after that season he slumped by 40 points and at the age of 33 it seemed his 5-foot-9 frame might be worn out.

But Mullen defied the odds again. The Flames practically gave him to Pittsburgh so he could finish his career in America and he probably will. It's just hard to know when.

Four years, two Stanley Cups, a serious neck injury, and 250 points later he's still going strong.

Joe will be 38 at month's end and he'll celebrate where he has every birthday of his life. In Hell's Kitchen, New York, or in front of the net.

Soccer sign up on weekend

THIS WEEKEND local players have another chance to sign up for Terrace Youth Soccer's 1995 season.

And those doing so will also be saving themselves a few bucks. Registration takes place at the Skeena Mall on Friday, 6-9 p.m., and Saturday, 10 a.m.- 4 p.m.

The fee for players born 1976-1984 is $60, $45 for those born 1985-1989. However, for those registering after Feb. 25 there will be a $15 late charge.

Copies of a birth certificate, passport or baptismal certificate must be produced when registering.

Anyone who still has their uniform from last year is also asked to return it at that time.

For more information, phone Bev Bujtas at 635-3719. Players are also reminded there will be a soccer boot exchange on Saturday, 10 a.m.- 2 p.m.

Clinic registration starts Friday

CALLING ALL potential coaches - this weekend is the time to sign up for a clinic scheduled for April 1-2.

The NCCP Level I Theory sessions are applicable to all sports and Chris Johnson will be the guest instructor for the event.

Registration is being taken by the Terrace Youth Soccer Association at the Skeena Mall on Friday, 6-9 p.m., and Saturday, 10 a.m.- 4 p.m.

Also coming up are two soccer clinics, one for Youth Competitive referees (Apr. 8-9) and the other a Level I Technical session. For more information on any of the above, phone 635-3719.

Hockey school plans finalized

AUGUST MAY be a long way off yet, but players wanting to sign up for the 8th Annual Terrace Hockey School had best hurry.

That's because there are only 32 spots available in each of the two sessions - Aug. 14-19 and Aug. 21-26 - which are open to players from five to 16 years.

Registration forms are now out and can be obtained by phoning Debra Johnson at 638-1675 between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The cost of each session is $110, the last year at that price, says Cliff Sharples, one of the organizers.

With ice rentals set to leap more than a third in July, Sharples said the school would use the financial cushion from previous years to effectively subsidize this year's school.

However, come 1996 enrollees will have to pay the full cost. What that might be will depend on whether there are any further rate hikes that year.

Apart from the daily hockey school, there will again be an evening hockey league for which registration is $30 per week.

The Terrace Standard reserves the right to classify ads under appropriate headings and to rate therefor and to determine page location.

The Terrace Standard reminds advertisers that it is against the provincial Human Rights Act to discriminate on the basis of children, marital status and employment when placing "For Rent" ads. Landlords can state a no-smoking preference.

The Terrace Standard reserves the right to revise, edit, classify or reject any advertisement and to retain any answers directed to the News Box Reply Service, and to repay the customer the sum paid for the advertisement and box rental.

Box replies on "Hold" instructions not picked up within 10 days of expiry of an advertisement will be destroyed unless mailing instructions are received. Those answering Box Numbers are requested not to send original documents to avoid loss.

All claims of errors in advertisements must be received by the publisher within 30 days after the first publication.

It is agreed by the advertiser requesting space that the liability of the Terrace Standard in the event of failure to publish an advertisement as published shall be limited to the amount paid by the advertiser for only one incorrect insertion for the portion of the advertising space occupied by the incorrect or omitted item only, and that there shall be no liability in any event greater than the amount paid for such advertising.

28. CARD OF THANKS

28. CARD OF THANKS

THANK YOU

The Terrace Ladies Curling Club would like to extend a "Heart"y thank you to the many businesses and merchants who kindly donated merchandise, services and great discounts toward our annual Valentines's Bonspiel held February 10, 11 & 12.

Once again, with your help our bonspiel was a great success. We hosted curlers from Prince Rupert, Smithers, Kitimat, Prince George and Salmon Arm.

Your kind and generous donations and support helped us host a great weekend and show our guests what a great place Terrace is.

Special thank you to Carters Jewellers who generously donated a diamond ring for a special raffle for the ladies registered to curl in our Bonspiel. The winner was Marnie Matthews.

Thank you to Air B.C. for donating a trip for 2 to Vancouver. All of the ladies curling in the Bonspiel entered the draw when they registered. The winner was Evelyn Johnson.

Thank you to the following sponsors.
